Austria's current Number 1 Markus Ragger was voted Austria's Player of the Century by the readers of 'Schach aktiv' magazine.

Shortly after the turmoil of World War I, the Austrian Chess Federation was founded in December 1920 in the Hotel Palace in the chess metropolis of Vienna.

The ACF started with 22 clubs. Josef Krejčík, who was also one of the strongest players at that time, was elected the first president. Krejčík was followed by Josef Hanacik and Franz Cejka, and from 1971 long-term president Prof. Kurt Jungwirth shaped Austrian's chess life for 46 years. He achieved the recognition of chess as a sport, was founder and president of the ECU and vice-president of the FIDE. Christian Hursky is heading the ÖSB since 2017.

The magazine “100 Years of ACF” takes a journey back in time (Wilhelm Steinitz conquered the chess world from Vienna, Carl Schlechter and Rudolf Spielmann were world-class players) and presents the currently strongest German-speaking GM Markus Ragger as Austria's player of the century.

Managers, artists and politicians like Arnold Schwarzenegger talk about why chess plays an essential role in their lives.

Further contributions to the magazine are dedicated to the successful work with young talents, the growing female chess scene and the future development of the sport of chess.

Austrian President Alexander Van der Bellen, ECU President Zurab Azmaiparashvili and FIDE President Arkady Dvorkovich congratulated the historic Chess Federation and are convinced that chess in Austria has a bright future ahead of it in the next hundred years.
Chess tradition in Belgium started long before the creation of the national chess association. Like all the major cities, Brussels already had a chess café in the 19th century, the Café de l’Europe, which housed a chess club in 1815, and the chess enthusiast will have analysed the games played during the several tournaments of Ostend at the beginning of the 20th century.

Roughly a hundred years ago, on 17 December 1920, representatives of the leading clubs in the country, namely from Antwerp, Ghent, Liège, and Brussels gathered in the ‘Cercle des Échecs Bruxelles’ for a special occasion. They signed the statute establishing the Belgian Chess Federation!

The first secretary of the newly born chess federation, Edmond Lancel, would later publish the famous Belgian chess magazine ‘L’Échiquier’ with regular contributions from Alekhine, Réti and Tartakower (1925–1939).

The foundation of the Belgian Chess Federation in 1920 also proved beneficial for the inception of FIDE four years later. The Belgian representative Léon Weltjens became a co-signatory of the FIDE Statute in Paris 1924, and the Belgian chess champion, Edgard Colle, impressed with a third place in the first amateur world championship.

Colle would also become a regular fixture in international professional tournaments, but his premature death in 1932 prevented him from putting Belgium among the leading chess nations in Europe.

For those wanting to know more about our history, we recommend the book written by Frank Hoffmeister at the occasion of the 100th anniversary of the federation. It is available in Dutch, French and German, and it can be ordered by writing to info@frbe-kbsb-ksb.be.
Belgian also have an entrepreneurial spirit, so that it is no surprise that Belgians are also keen to make an international contribution, such as Willy Icklicki (Chief Operating Officer at FIDE), Patrick Van Hoolandt (president of the A.I.D.E.F., the international French-speaking chess association) and other Belgians who promote chess in the various commissions of FIDE and ECU. And what about other Belgian ‘products’: Houdini, the chess program, and Thinkers Publishing, one of the best chess editors in the world. Is it therefore a surprise that – even without having real top players – we also manage to organize big tournaments. Spa 1926, Liège 1930, Antwerp 1932 and Ostend, again, in 1936–1937. In a less distant past, the top elite in chess came to play in the Lost Boys (Antwerp), the Swift tournaments (Brussels) and the Grand Chess Tour (Leuven). And even the youth can play in ideal conditions: the organizers of the Belgian Youth Chess Championships make use of about 120 electronic chess boards.

Our Burgundian lifestyle is also reflected in the world of chess. The habit of offering something to drink before a game (and more than one drink after it) is something that surprises players coming from abroad.

Belgian chess history has been characterized by three main aspects:

The national chess federation has always had to demonstrate enormous flexibility and adaptability. In our small country, the political situation has never been simple and when the country was split into three language communities in 1970, this naturally also had an impact on chess. Three regional federations were founded under the national federation, each of which must abide by regional rules and decisions.

Belgian also have an entrepreneurial spirit, so that it is no surprise that Belgians are also keen to make an international contribution, such as Willy Icklicki (Chief Operating Officer at FIDE), Patrick Van Hoolandt (president of the A.I.D.E.F., the international French-speaking chess association) and other Belgians who promote chess in the various commissions of FIDE and ECU. And what about other Belgian ‘products’: Houdini, the chess program, and Thinkers Publishing, one of the best chess editors in the world. Is it therefore a surprise that – even without having real top players – we also manage to organize big tournaments. Spa 1926, Liège 1930, Antwerp 1932 and Ostend, again, in 1936–1937. In a less distant past, the top elite in chess came to play in the Lost Boys (Antwerp), the Swift tournaments (Brussels) and the Grand Chess Tour (Leuven). And even the youth can play in ideal conditions: the organizers of the Belgian Youth Chess Championships make use of about 120 electronic chess boards.

Our Burgundian lifestyle is also reflected in the world of chess. The habit of offering something to drink before a game (and more than one drink after it) is something that surprises players coming from abroad.

And our tournaments are not only for chess lovers, but also for life lovers. Why not play the tournament of Ghent during the festivities in the city, Bruges with its beautiful decor, Charleroi with its relaxed atmosphere, Brasschaat with its conviviality or Liège with its warm hospitality?

Is it our lifestyle that made a lot of players settle in Belgium? Victor Soutmanbeieff and Georges Lalevitch, the unfortunate Akiba Rubinstein and later, top trainer Vladimir Chuchelov and Michael Gurevitch came to Belgium and even Magnus Carlsen went to an international school in Belgium when he was 7. Did he learn some valuable skills to become World Champion in Belgium?

Our contribution at the chess board may not be underestimated neither: we mentioned Colle already, who gave his name to a rock-solid opening, and Jadoul gave his name to a variation in the Scandinavian, but Belgians are also known for their problemists. And did you know we even have a world champion? Indeed, in 2017 Daniel Dardha has become U14 world champion blitz and two years later, he even became the youngest national champion at the age of 13 years…

In short, the Belgian chess federation is 100 years old, but still alive and kicking.

> Board Member of the Belgian Chess Federation
> Member of ECU Educational Comission
indeed, Gunter Delhaes wouldn’t break the record of the longest presidency in Belgian chess history. He was at the head of the national federation for no less than eleven years. Only one chairman held that post longer than he did. Gunter’s long chairmanship was not at all self-evident, because during his term of office, the Belgian Chess Federation went through one of its most serious crises, when a member of the board had robbed the savings account.

Today, the federation is doing well again, and that is largely thanks to Gunter, who always put the development of chess first. By the way, that was not only the case in the national chess federation. He had already developed his own club, Rochade Eupen, into one of the most important clubs in the country.

He also made every effort in the international organisations, ECU and FIDE, whether it was in the event commission or in the ethics commission. Moreover he supported and advised members of the BCF in their goal to realize an international career in ECU as well as in FIDE.

For that reason Gunter became a respected person in the international chess world as well as in the Belgian Chess Federation.

It is therefore not surprising that the BCF governing body decided to include him in the list of Honorary Presidents?

The fact that this is not an end point for Gunter characterizes him entirely, because even before that honorary title was voted, he said that the federation could still contact him if he could still be of any use with his expertise.

The development of chess first. That is how we know Gunter Delhaes, our latest honorary president.

For sure Gunter will always be an important support in de Belgian Chess Federation.

The board of the BCF wishes to thank Gunter for his many years of dedication for chess in general and for chess in the BCF in particular!
Running parallel to the FIDE Congress was ChessTech2020, the online conference on chess and technology, which drew 526 registrations from more than 70 countries.

Following a welcome to the two-day-meeting from Zurab Azmaiparashvili, President of ECU, the FIDE President Arkady Dvorkovich gave a keynote address Chess: Driving Technological Innovations in the 21st Century and answered a wide range of questions afterwards. The event, the 8th in the sequence of the London Chess Conferences, was directed by John Foley from ChessPlus Limited, a London-based training and education company, with a programme developed by Stefan Löffler of ChesstechNews.

FIDE was a foundation sponsor through its continental funding of the ECU.

Commercial sponsors of the event included Tornelo, Chessable, DGT, LearningChess, ChessKid, ChessLang, SzuperChess, GameAhead Consulting and ChessStars.

The Zoom-based conference comprised 44 sessions with 122 contributors. The conference was very well received with an average satisfaction star rating of 4.3/5. According to the post-conference survey, the three most frequent descriptions of the conference were “interesting”, “informative” and “inspiring”.

ECU President Zurab Azmaiparashvili sent a welcome message #ChessTech
There were many memorable sessions.

- The gender issues from the previous conference were revisited in a lively international forum.
- There were three sessions on Erasmus projects: Castle, CGS and 8by8; and one session featuring the European Research Council funded Digital Ludeme Project.
- There were several panels such as “Is Chess an Esport?” and “How to Make Chess Greener?”
- Many people praised the session on new formats for chess journalism.
- There was a competition for the best chess startup 2020. This was won by Chessvision.ai by Pawel Kacprzak from Poland.

In addition to the above sessions in English, there were also segments of the conference conducted in French, Spanish and German which were reported to be highly satisfactory. The conference also comprised a social networking “Chess Cafe” where it was possible to meet with other attendees in an informal atmosphere.

For those who did not attend the conference, these are available in three categories. Some are available to the general public and are being released one-by-one with social media notifications. A second category is for those people who registered for the conference and may not have been able to get into some popular sessions. The third category is reserved for those with professional tickets. Access to categories two and three is available for a modest fee.
This was the first time the two-day Teaching Mathematics through Chess Training Course (ECU102) was given online. The course was well received and all attendees would recommend the course to their fellow teachers.

All the participants successfully passed the online test for the ECU Chess and Mathematics Teacher Certificate.

FEEDBACK

"Thank you Rita for this training. I will use what I learned for my math and chess lessons. Everything was very clear and you gave us a lot of time so that we could understand the material and use the exercises."

"I had been looking for ways to teach kids math concepts through chess and it was clarified."

"As a nonmathematician, I had some qualms about taking the course at first, but I learned a lot and have gained confidence in presenting more math strategies to my students."

Allow me to quote Mr. Theodoros Tsorbatzoglou, the secretary general of ECU, in his small reaction on Facebook: “It was an epic and historical year 2020 for the whole world”. I fully agree! In many ways, maybe it was a year we should forget as soon as possible. Or maybe not?

Compared with 2019, 2020 was a totally different year! No one doubt that Covid 19 was the biggest cause. In 2019 ECU organized 13 OTB tournaments during which 168 arbiters were appointed. However in 2020 no OTB tournaments were organized! They were all postponed and after a few month they were even cancelled. It was a year in which ECU had to adopt in the new global situation digitizing all services and events. The internet became an even more important tool then the previous years, not only for the organization of tournaments but also to organize meetings and seminars. This was a huge challenge for ECU as well as for the ECU AC.

With great proud and pleasure ECU announced the birth of “the European Online Chess Championships”. It offered the possibility to all chess players to still practice their favourite hobby.

Five championships were organized in close cooperation with the ECU AC and a few national federations: The European Online Individual Chess Championship 2020, The European Online Youth Chess Championship 2020, The European Online Corporate Chess Championship 2020, The European Online Women’s Club Cup 2020 and the European Online Blitz Championship 2020.

To guide these championships in the right direction and to make sure everything went smoothly, many arbiters (97) were appointed for these online championships. At that time, ECU AC realised that there was a strong need for the training of arbiters to be active during online tournaments. ECU AC realized that what we ask to an online arbiter is not what we need from an arbiter who is active in a standard tournament. ECU AC has learned along the tournaments that being an arbiter in one online competition is by far different from being an arbiter in an over the board event. For that reason, and with the approval of ECU Board, ECU AC has set up an online training program for “Online Arbiter”. This certification, which will be mandatory to serve as an arbiter in European Online Championships, will certify that a particular arbiter has some special skills for online tournaments and confirm the ability of an arbiter to work in online events.

The first online training will be organized in the second half of January. Further information can be found on the ECU AC website.

ECU AC also organized a FIDE Arbiters Seminar which was, also forced by Covid 19, held online.

The FA seminar started on Monday May 4th with 41 participants out of 27 federations. For the first time the test which was used for the exam, was a standardized test in close cooperation with FIDE ARB, which should be a norm in the future for other FA Seminars. 9 participants passed the test.

Secretary of ECU AC

Prior to the FA seminar, on Sunday May 3rd, there was also a workshop for all ECU arbiters, organized by the ECU Arbiters’ Council. During this workshop the members of the ECU Arbiters’ Council explained what they have been doing during the 2 years since they have been appointed. The large number of participants (77!) shows that there was a need to organize such a workshop. The attending arbiters received a clear overview of the system of appointment, the evaluation of arbiters during ECU Events, an extensive chapter about GDPR, the reporting procedure, all kind of reports etc... Also the necessary information was given about the ECU Arbiters’ Council website; what can be found on the website and were this information can be found.

Based on the comments and suggestions which were given during this online workshop, ECU AC made some changes on their website. A new page was created were everyone can find all the articles from the past two years as well as links to the all E-magazine issues. Every month there is an article in the ECU Magazine, written by one of the members of the ECU AC.

Also other arbiters are invited to write an article if they feel the need to do so. They can send their article to the secretary of the ECU AC. Even fun was provided with a riddle and a crossword.

Also the possibility is created to the arbiters to subscribe to our website. In that way, every arbiter doesn’t have to miss any of the articles in the future. He/she will also be informed of other announcements and events of the ECU Arbiters’ world.

The ECU AC can always be in touch with them. Other changes on our website were related to our reporting procedure. All forms for reporting procedure and for evaluation are now available online.

Other online workshops were also organized such as an ECU Arbiters’ Council Online workshop for Arbiters in Online Chess, which was organized together with FIDE Arbiters’ Commission. Chairman Tomek Delega (ECU AC) and chairman Laurent Freyd (FIDE ARB) were the hosts.

More than 500 arbiters attended. The video on Youtube was watched for more than several 1000 times.

In addition a webinar about cheating in online chess tournaments was organized in cooperation with David Cordover, the founder of Tornelo, and a FIDE Arbiters Seminar for ladies.

And last but certainly not least the ECU AC decided during their online meeting on December 7th that the list of arbiters which was made after the “Call of Interest” at the beginning of this year, will be used for the appointment of arbiters in ECU Events in 2021. The arbiters which were appointed by ECU AC to be active during the first (cancelled) OTB tournaments of 2020 will be appointed first for the OTB tournaments in 2021.

When you are reading this article, 2020 will already be a bad memory, for most people to be forgotten as soon as possible. Therefore, on behalf of the ECU AC, I would like to wish all our colleagues and chess friends a prosperous, healthy and happy New Year!

Stay safe, stay happy, stay healthy!
The move counter, to use or not to use?

A few weeks ago I received an email from IA-A Sabrina de San Vicente (a colleague from Uruguay) with her opinion about the move counter after an article about that subject has been published in the ECU Magazine. I quote her complete mail below.

“I am not a European Arbiter, but many of them are my friends, my oldest daughter is living there, and also I love reading your Magazine each month. So I feel free to give you my opinion regarding move counter.

Despite players like to see all the time available at any time, and you don’t have half of the players in the first two rounds asking why their time was not added, cons of using move counter are more decisive.

When players forget to press their clocks, the flag falls after 40 moves were completed and you have to correct the clocks and disturb them.

The worst situation is created by players pressing the clock twice, the 30 minutes are given before 40 moves. They have to stop the clock and call the arbiter. The arbiter has to go to the board, examine the situation, and adjust the clocks. Meanwhile, players eventually find winning ideas. This could also be used to cheat, a player can press twice the clock when the opponent goes to the toilet and make his opponent lose on time while he thinks that 40 moves were completed.

That’s why I prefer not to use it. Having to intervene in a game at that moment should be avoided as much as you can.”
